Holme Valley camping and caravan park is nestling in a valley on the edge of the Peak District. Surrounded by sixteen acres of woodland it is a perfect place for families to explore the outdoors.

The family run business involves three generations. In 1986 Philip and Hazel opened the park after converting a derelict mill site. The park is popular with fans of the BBC series Last of the Summer Wine. The programme filmed at the site several times in the 1990's.

Facilities recently expanded which involved the construction of a luxury toilet and shower block. Cubicle Centre offered layout and design advice in the early stages. This resulted in the modern design the owners were looking for.

For the shower and toilet cubicles Cairngorm panels are ideal due to them being water resistant and durable. The washrooms have cubicle doors and wall panels in three different colours. The colours represent the grass, trees and blue skies of the country side.

Plumbware.co.uk (operated by Cubicle Centre) provided sinks, urinals, toilet pans and other sanitary ware.

“We are delighted with the finished washrooms and have been receiving nothing but praise from our customers.”
