

The Kelpie is a supernatural waterhorse from Celtic folklore, believed to haunt Scottish lochs and rivers. Reputedly they transform into beautiful women to lure men into the water to their death. These kelpies were created by Sculptor Andy Scott for British Waterways.

Galvanizing protects the Kelpies steel skin against corrosion for decades. The zinc and steel form an alloy on the kelpies which is 150% harder than the steel itself. The Kelpies are fully immersed ensuring all surfaces are protected.
