

There is movement wherever you go in this Constellation. Sprouting out from the stables are the Musca and Satellite Spinners that challenge the children to explore the forces of rotation as they spin around. Linking the two stables is the Moon Belt overhead, which flexes and rocks as it is crossed. Even the blue tube rocks back and forth as children climb up it or glide down. In the core of the stables the Play Shells provide a place to sit, lay or climb on, to watch the others or have a rest on the way through the Pollux constellation.
