

QBOX

Envatech presents QBox, the new collection designed by nuklee which offers different solutions in order to configure workspaces. Conceived as a partition system, but different from the usual types, each Qbox is a small architecture converted as a product, a delimited and autonomous space with the possibility of being configured according to the needs of each project. QBox born from a cube concept, that independently of the environment provides all the necessary elements to structure the contemporary office.

With a flexible system, designed to generate spaces, it allows adapting to the different functional and aesthetic project requirements, and it offers the freedom to choose between the different materials, finishes, colors and accessories from the collection. The different models of the collection provide closed points in installations where the predominant trend is to work in large open spaces. Currently, the workplace is more linked to technology than to the physical space, the information is accessible everywhere and the real time connection allows maintaining the communication despite of the distance, nowadays the proximity is virtual. For this reason it is important the space where one works lives together symbiotically with the technology that makes this connectivity possible: QBox has been designed with these parameters in mind.
