Replacing an old living wall system that had failed, ANS were taken on board to design and install a new living wall using the natural soil-based ANS Living Wall System. The new living wall thriving in the atrium meeting space has made a massive difference to the office. Before installation of the new living wall, the sad and depressing state of the original wall was a sore subject amongst the office staff, with many mentioning the effect it had on the office atmosphere and the feel of the space. With the office space already having plenty of natural light, the living wall really is the finishing touch to the biophilic design. Now with this flourishing living wall, the employees are pleased to see the feature growing and changing and blossoming in its environment.
